June 11, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Dojo Pro Limited, a business that sells Jiu-Jitsu and other martial arts gear on Amazon.com has today announced that they will soon be releasing pink gis for girls. They are currently selling uniforms in blue, black and white, which have proven to be very popular. By mid-July, they expect their pink versions to become available and it is believed that they will become as popular as their current Jiu-Jitsu gis.

"We have been creating high end Jiu-Jitsu uniforms for some time now and have built up a reputation of delivering some of the highest quality in the business," says Brett Kraiger from Dojo Pro Limited. "All our uniforms are designed with the input of BJJ instructors and competitors, to ensure they meet all the necessary standards and comfort."

Dojo Pro first came into business in January of 2015, although one of the owners has run a physical martial arts retail store for over 10 years. Since starting, they have received 5-star reviews from top instructors for their various products. Many of these reviews have been left by parents of kids using the uniforms, but some reviews have come from highly successful instructors, including Alex Scott, who has a huge kids class in his dojo.

"I have found the Dojo Pro BJJ gi for kids to be a high quality, stylish and comfortable gi. I run a busy BJJ for kids program and have been very satisfied with the performance of this gi, and more importantly so have the parents", says Alex Scott. "I wouldn't hesitate to recommend the Dojo Pro if you are looking for a premium quality kid's BJJ gi at an affordable price. It is nice and light but very tough, the triple stitching is virtually indestructible. I'm confident any parent who buys one of these gi's will be 100% satisfied and the kids will love it too."

Dojo Pro decided to make BJJ uniforms for kids to voice their personal passion for martial arts. Together, the owners have been involved in martial arts for over five decades, as well as being experienced in eCommerce and retail. Rene Kunz, one of the founders of the company, opened a martial arts store in 2003. He quickly found that his customers had demands that were not currently being met on the market, which led him to start to think about developing his own product range. Brett Kraiger, the other founder, has always had a strong link to Amazon selling. Together, they saw an opening in the market, which was the birth of Dojo Pro.

Committed to ensuring all children are able to enjoy martial arts, Dojo Pro felt it was necessary to deliver something targeted specifically at girls. Their pink Jui-Jitsu gi will soon be available on Amazon and further updates will be provided until then.
