June 13, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Polar Comfort Company Limited, a company based in Los Angeles, California, has announced that they are helping to save the planet and promote awareness of global warming by giving 10% of all money earned in sales to help save and protect polar bears. They are well known for their Enzo products, which can be seen on the company's Amazon sales channel, as well as through their own website. The company has stated the following in relation to their work with charity:

"Enzo's Private Selection is a pro-profit company, which means we give back our profit to help benefit the world. Enzo's Comfort line is dedicated to helping polar bear by donating 10% of all profits to World Wild Life (WWF) "Adopt a polar bear" campaign."

One of the products that the company is known best for is their travel pillow, which is said to offer perfect support for travel by airplane, car, train, bus, or any other mode of transportation where passengers may be sitting for long periods of time. The neck pillow is created using new cooling gel padding technology and premium density memory foam that allows each individual to find their own comfort level, without overheating during travel. The company is so confident in this travel pillow that they offer a customer satisfaction guarantee with refund. In regards to this policy, Polar Comfort Company Limited has said:

"The hard part about buying a travel pillow is that there is no scientific way to predict whether or not a certain density will be right for you. That's why we have a no-questions ask money back guarantee policy, so if you feels like the pillow is not quite right for you we are happy to refund you in full."

Currently all of the products supplied by Polar Comfort Company Limited are shipped to Amazon by air, and they have recently been promoting an upcoming free giveaway which will be available through their social media account on Facebook due to the launch of this new product. All of this promoting and advertising reportedly helps the company to bring more awareness to their cause of global warming awareness and the safety of the polar bears affected by these climate changes.

Polar Comfort Company Limited invites those interested in learning more about their work with the Polar Bears, their travel pillow, or their other comfort inducing products to visit their website, check out their Amazon sales page, and also visit them on their various social media accounts. They encourage feedback, and invite customers to communicate with them using the information made available on their online contact page.

They have suggested that the more individuals who purchase their neck pillow or try their matcha green tea and other products should be proud of their input in the World Wild Life (WWF) "Adopt a polar bear" campaign, which they hold very dear to their hearts. They have also made it clear that while ten percent may seem like a small number, it goes a long way as these sales add up and produce more support for the bears and those who work with them.
