June 15, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Michael Penn, spokesperson for the company Korus, has announced that their weightlifting gloves for men are for sale on Amazon. Michael added that because there were only extra-large sizes available, the heavy duty training gloves are going for a lower price compared to the regular retail value. However, he stated that the gloves will also fit men that have large hands, as the sizes are very close.

Korus said that the men extra large workout gloves are designed to be very comfortable while still looking good. The men heavy duty leather weightlifting gloves have neoprene wrist straps in order to provide good support, and are made from genuine goat leather and stretch fabric for more durability and the right fit. ShoppingOasis wrote the following review on Amazon,

"Excellent fit, these are the XL Men's version and fit perfectly for my friends hands. Hard to find a fit like as good as these gloves, he says. Great grip, perfect tightness without feeling uncomfortable. Very high end design and A++ quality. Thank you."

Michael Penn stated that one of the features customers will really appreciate is the synthetic leather palms that have been designed into the weightlifting gloves. Zone specific added foam padding has been implemented into the leather palms so that customers can get more enjoyment when lifting serious weights or performing certain body exercises such as pull-ups. He stated that the company's goal was to create a pair of heavy-duty training gloves that enabled men to achieve maximum muscle gain, but without all of the unnecessary pain that came from the typical blisters and tears when working out with poor quality gloves, or no gloves at all.

Korus said that one of their secrets to creating a high quality pair of training gloves was because their product is sold and used by people that knows what it takes to make a training glove. David B., another customer who purchased the gloves, wrote the following review on Amazon,

I'm very impressed with everything about these gloves plus the fit is just perfect! They are made with real leather and look like they are going to really last for a long time. The strap adds extra support around the wrist which is a nice feature. My son saw them on my dresser, tried them on and what do you know... he loved them! I decided to give them to him and am ordering myself another pair. If you're looking for high quality, durable weightlifting gloves, look no further. You'll be very happy with these!"

Korus said that their goal was also to provide high quality customer service to any person that purchased the gloves, and they back this statement up by offering a 30 day money-back guarantee to anyone that is not completely satisfied with the product. They said that this is an excellent way to provide a risk free environment for the customers to use the gloves and see for themselves the type of quality they will be getting.
