Sheri Summers, who is the creator and instructor of the American Accent Course, has announced that they have reduced the price of the course from its original $300 price tag to $97. She said that the American Accent Course, an online training program, has been developed for adults who speak English as a second language and would like to enhance their American English pronunciation and accent. It is available to speakers of all languages.

Sheri said that while a lot of people speak English after many years of learning, and can rightfully claim to know the language well, some are still not well understood by native English speakers. This can be a big problem in their social and work life, because communication is key in moving forward.

Pronunciation training is not usually something students get in their English classes, which means many are often in shock when they come to an English-speaking country and find their speaking skills lacking.

One student of the course, Daisuke Yamada, noted, "Being Japanese, I have seen so many people struggling with English conversation, mainly because we studied English from textbooks and teachers who cannot speak English well. And, although there are so many books about 'English pronunciation' published in Japan, they only refer to specific sounds without any reference to rhythm nor intonation."

By reducing the American Accent Course to $97, more people will now have the opportunity to jump on board and improve that one area in the English language that is usually neglected in the majority of English-speaking courses.

Sheri said that one factor the majority of participants will appreciate about the American Accent Course is that it is accessible from any part of the world. As long as they have an Internet connection, they will be able to access all the information needed to learn about American English pronunciation and accent.

The online program is divided into certain sections, all focusing on a specific area to help students improve their accent. One area will focus on learning all of the sounds of English, and how to pronounce them the right way. There is also a section that provides speaking and listening exercises, as well as a variety of tasks to help the student develop new habits and muscle memory. There are also rhythm and intonation materials, progress quizzes, and a section that focuses on using correct pitch.

Sheri Summers said that the above-mentioned topics are just a few of what will be taught on the online training program. She invites all those who are interested in taking the course or looking to learn more about Pronunciation and Accent Training to go to their website at www.AmericanAccentCourse.com for full details. There is also a FAQ section to answer many of the typical questions that learners have put forward, which can be found near the bottom of the website.

The American Accent Course has already attracted students from various professions and fields such as engineers, educators, real estate agents, IT professionals, customer service reps, business people, and others. The goal of the course is to ensure that every student has a better chance of opening their lives to more meaningful interactions and opportunities, both on the personal and professional levels.

Participant Lana Lifshitz was already working in finance when she took the course. She reported that, "The American Accent Course has been a real eye-opener for me. During the course I have learned techniques to apply which have been essential to my progress in speaking clearer English. It has been the best investment I have made to increase my confidence."
