TreadHunter's website offers tips for buying tires in the United States. The new website lists tire basics, selection recommendations, and a tire shop location finder tool.

Atlanta GA: TreadHunter has announced the launch of their new tire shop location finder designed to assist U.S. buyers in the purchase of automobile tires. Worn or under-inflated tires put the vehicle, passengers, and others at risk. Most drivers are not knowledgeable about tires which can lead to errors in selecting new tires and over-spending. The basics of tire selection include affordable price, availability, appearance, and reputation. The website has developed a list which can help buyers understand which tires are right for a specific vehicle.

According to Greg Spence, "At Atlanta based TreadHunter, we make finding new tires quick and easy. We connect you to tire shops in your area to find the tires you want, at the price you want. You can conveniently compare hundreds of new and used tires all at once, making your new tire search as stress-free as possible. If you're looking for quality tires at an affordable price, register to find the best local tire deals."

The website walks prospective buyers through the steps to understand the characteristics of tire treads, sidewalls, and other features. These features aid in selecting the replacement tires which are a balance between ride quality, fuel economy, wear, load capability, and cost. Selecting the right tire size is critical for tire safety. Buyers should also understand the speed rating and load rating.

The tire guide contains recommendations for determining the number of tires which need to be replaced. Customers may purchase one, two, three or all four tires. Using consumer product reviews is a good way to get good quality and price in a tire purchase. The more comprehensive the review is, the better informed the buyer will be. The tire shop location finder tool helps to find the best places to make the purchase of tires.
