Title: Costa Rica Massage School Holds Graduation Ceremony for Biggest Graduating Class. The Costa Rica School of Massage Therapy (CRSMT), based in Nicoya, Costa Rica, has held the ceremonies for this year's massage therapy graduates on April 28, 2017. It was was biggest graduating class in the history of the school. Twenty-seven students were able to complete the full 600 hour massage therapy curriculum.

Tammy McGee, Director of Admissions at the CRSMT, says: "We are so proud of all the work that our students have done and we look forward to hearing what they will be able to accomplish in their careers that will further the profession and the health of the people they will work with. The Rana Class of 2017 is the largest we have had, and we couldn't be happier for the school and the graduates."

The ages of the graduates ranged between 18 and 45. They came from all over the world, including the USA, Canada, the United Kingdom, Bulgaria, and Malaysia. The event was held at a local seafood restaurant called 'El Ancla'. The ceremony itself was right on Samara Beach during sunset, which was followed immediately by dinner.

"In addition to the 27 students and our faculty and staff, we were thrilled to also have over 30 family members and friends of students in attendance at the event," adds Tammy McGee. "This was so important for our graduates as well, who rightfully felt proud of their achievements." CRSMT, as shown on their Facebook page, is incredibly popular with massage therapy students the world over. "This is an amazing school and an amazing experience," says Meg R. "The instructors were so knowledgeable and supportive. This place is more than a massage therapy school. It is a place to discover, challenge and grow as a whole person. I cannot imagine my life without this place and these people. I know my career as a massage therapist is off to a fantastic start."

The graduates are now expected to return to their own homes where they will be ready to start work as massage therapists. Many have gone before them and have launched very successful careers. The credentials provided by the CRSMT are globally recognized as being some of the best in the world.
