During pregnancy, a woman has to face quite significant challenges to her body. She is more at risk of swollen feet and ankles, edema, and spider veins. This can be avoided, however, by wearing good quality compression socks. Unfortunately, these socks are often unsightly and many women also find them uncomfortable. In response to this, Burlingame, CA company Wanderlust has recently released a new line of skin colored maternity compression stockings to help provide relief.

A representative from Team Wanderlust says: "Compression stockings are never going to win at a fashion award, but they are very important, particularly for pregnant women. What we have aimed to do is develop compression stockings that do what they are supposed to do while being comfortable and not so unsightly. We're happy to see that we have already received a lot of positive reviews about them."

The compression socks are designed to provide immediate pain and swelling relief. They offer true medical graduated compression pressure. This does make them feel snug, but they actually provide the perfect level of compression to ease pain and avoid major swelling. They come in a range of sizes to fit each particular shoe size.

The Team Wanderlust representative adds: "We have designed these to be beneficial throughout all stages of pregnancy and beyond. They will last much longer than nine months, so you can get a lot of use out of them. They have open toes and can help a range of painful conditions, including but not limited to fibromyalgia, cramps, thrombosis, edema, circulation, tendonitis, diabetes, varicose veins, and even restless leg syndrome."

The maternity compression socks have truly been designed with expectant mothers in mind. They even come with a 100% "motherly love" satisfaction guarantee. They also have various advanced features, such as the premium single layer weaving, which prevents itchiness and rubbing. It also has incredible arch, foot, ankle, and joint support, which helps to prevent plantar fasciitis. Last but not least, they are designed not to leave red marks, which are commonly seen in other compression stockings. And, being skin colored, they can be worn without standing out.
