May 19, 2017 -
Queensland electricians, a leading Australia based electrical service company, have launched a short electrical safety and energy savings course. The program was launched recently as part of the company?s efforts to create awareness about electrical safety and ways to cut on energy costs.

?Our new plan is to make our customers aware of the simple hazards that could trigger electrical fires at home. We want to educate people on the benefits of using the right electrical tools and why they need to put up electrical safety measures in their homes. Our program is a two day event hosted online,? Ronnie Ford, the company head of Find Queensland Electricians says.

The program while short covers a wide range of topics. It introduces the learners to electrical safety basics, how to hire experienced electricians, home inspection programs and ways to detect potentially serious electrical issues. The course also highlights some of the services customers can look forward to get from experienced electricians. Additionally, the program trains customers how to do simple home inspections and know when to alert experts to fix potentially dangerous cases.

According to the company?s spokesperson, Millie Moore from http://findqldelectricians.com.au, the program will be offered free of charge to everyone willing to complete it. The course will be mainly offered online, but customers willing to get oral lessons about electrical safety and can contact the company through their official contact details on their website. Millie emphasizes however, that the program only teaches customers the basics of electrical safety and should therefore be used as a guide and not as a source of knowledge to fix serious electrical issues.

?We are teaching everyone who wishes to learn a few things about electrical safety. However, the program is done online, or offered by our experienced electricians at any of our branches here in the country. We however are emphasizing that electrical issues are complex matters that should only be handled by an expert. We are emphasizing that people should only use our course as a guide for basic electrical safety knowledge. And for serious issues, contact our offices around the country."

Brisbane electrician services Company, started by Ronnie Ford, has led in electrical services in Brisbane and its environs for more than 10 years. Their electricians have topped the ranks of electrician online reviews for years, while the company?s customer oriented policies have boosted the company?s success to its current status. According to Joe, their customers? loyalty and goodwill have also been contributing factors to their growth.

?In the over 10 years we have been in services, most of our customers have always supported us. In their reviews of our electricians online and in their loyalty towards their services-our customers have been good to us. Thankfully, with our customers? support and the hard work of our electricians, we have launched our electrical safety and energy saving program successfully. We hope that what our program offers the customers helps them learn a lot about electrical safety and energy saving at home."
