July 14, 2017 -

National Press Distributors has finished compiling a report of the best Photographers in the United States of America. This data was compiled based upon customer perceptions and the overall customer service records of companies around the country. Contained within the press release is a short preview with the top five offerings in the photography category.

Based in the Seattle area, Chris Landry Photography & Video Production (landryphoto.com) is also willing to travel for clients. This photographer has built his career on making customers happy. Brandon T. on Google said, "Chris is a super friendly professional with an excellent eye for commercial photography and video. If they're looking for a video to use on their website, look no further." Overall impressions are that this skilled photographer is willing to go the extra mile for all of his clients.

Jason Malouin is another photographer based in Australia, but makes frequent trips around the world. His top ratings are mostly due to destination photography requests.Glen C. on Linked In said, "Get themselves in front of the lens with him. The experience is something else entirely. Best money they're going to spend on their personal brand." Willing to try new things, Jason appears able to work with even the most interesting client requests.

Based in Nevada, Rose Street Studio is known for one of a kind desert photography as well. Jeri H. said, "Jamie worked with our large family. We had sixteen adults, four children, one cranky toddler, and one baby. Jamie worked with such enthusiasm, charm and creativity. Her work is absolutely stunning and I highly recommend her." While this photographer does have some travel restrictions, their willingness to include whole families has pushed them to the top of their field.

Based in Austin, Texas, Tara Welch Photography is never out of its depth. From beaches to deserts and all terrain in between, working with Tara is working with a true artist. Katie S. said, "She did such an amazing job and our photos are so stunning. Both my fiance and I are not super comfortable posing in front of a camera, but she was able to get us comfortable and we had a blast!" A willingness to work with clients until they are comfortable helps Tara overcome other photographers in the area to come out on top.

Lastly, a NYC based wedding photographer, Syphotography is also able to capture other events, landscapes, and animals with ease. Abby R. on Wedding Wire says, "Beautiful pictures and very professional. definitely worked within our budget without sacrificing quality." A special willingness to keep within one's budget has earned Syed a strong following among previous clients.

The dynamic ability of photographers to base their entire business around their customers has brought about a large number of benefits for customers within this niche. Going forward, the companies topping this report are likely to stand out as world leaders in the profession.
