THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. -- A long-time chiropractic practice located in the city, Advanced Chiropractic Rehabilitation, is now under new ownership. Dr. Nick Brock, who has practiced at the chiropractic clinic for years, recently took over from Dr. Jon Scott as owner of the practice.

Dr. Brock is highly experienced, with more than 10 years in the health and fitness industry, and aims to continue the excellent work started by Dr. Scott.

Dr. Brock says: "It has been an honor to work with Dr. Scott for the past several years. We discussed the possibility of myself taking over the practice for some time and I was very excited when the time to do so had finally arrived. This practice is highly respected in the community, and I aim to continue to provide the excellent chiropractic service that we have been giving the community."

Dr. Brock, who now is the sole chiropractor at Advanced Chiropractic Rehabilitation, injured his neck when he was 8, and it was then that he got introduced to the field of chiropractic care. He has relentlessly pursued his interest in the field. He completed an undergraduate degree in health and exercise science at the University of California Santa Barbara, after which he entered the workforce at the Facilities Management Injury Reduction and Prevention Team. He then attended the Cleveland Chiropractic College, where he obtained his license to practice.

Committed to his own personal health and fitness, and in helping others to reach similar goals, chiropractic care was a logical career. Dr. Brock believes in whole health, and integrates this into his care as well. Indeed, his patients have been full of praise about his work.

Barbara A.H. says on the Advanced Chiropractic Rehabilitation website: "I am an R.N., medical massage therapist and very picky who I go to and who I refer to. Dr. Brock is enthusiastic, knowledgeable and has a style of structural traction that makes real and lasting changes in the spine and function. I have severe scoliosis and whiplash as well as a short leg. Dr. Nick is the first one who could promise a structural change in a safe and effective way. You won't find another office in this area with his techniques. In addition to that he is also a physical fitness trainer so he knows how to eat, exercise and help very comprehensively."

Dr. Brock is looking forward to many more years of practice as a chiropractor serving Thousand Oaks.
