

EXOUS Bodygear Now Offering Knee Support With Just Released Running Knee Brace

June 18, 2015

June 18, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

EXOUS Bodygear is pleased to announce their high performance knee brace, the ex-70101. EXOUS says that in order for athletes and runners to get knee support for running they should consider investing in a running knee brace. Their latest knee brace offers a number of benefits not included in other products of this kind, such as holding the knee firmly in place while running, resolving of patella issues, and ergonomic support. They have said the following regarding the stability and non-slip functionality of this brace:

"The very nature that you are looking for a running knee support means you expect it to add functional support in the midst of exercise. Sadly many knee supports are not designed with this in mind, made more so for sedentary or injured individuals where the primary use of the support is to aid in the acute phase of recovery, but we know individuals may have chronic long-term need for additional pain relief or stability and this can also mean during exercise."

Knee support for running is a long standing issue for athletes, as knees can become tired, sore, and injured quite easily during normal every day workouts. EXOUS believes that they have finally found a way to help active individuals find some relief, and possibly even prevent further injury from occurring with the use of their brace. The company offers a large supply of information on the product and its benefits through their online blog, and they also encourage those who are interested in buying to visit their social media account at <https://www.facebook.com/exousbodygear> Through the Facebook account, EXOUS supplies photos, updates on products, promotions, and allows for consumer interaction.

The Facebook account is also an excellent area for consumers to read what other shoppers have thought of the ex-701 performance knee support brace, and to learn whether or not it has worked for others with similar conditions. New customers can leave reviews and feedback here, comment, like, share, and even privately message the company from this platform.

The brace is being sold through the company's Amazon.co.uk sales outlet, and is new for the 2015 year. It offers a 4 way compression system, which helps to isolate the patella tendon during exercise. The brace is fully adjustable for customization among customers, so that it fits properly around the knee as a whole. With double lateral stabilizers, the product reportedly is light enough not to impede running, at only 175g, while still offering firm support that is necessary when joints are in motion.

For running knee support, EXOUS has made it clear that this brace is at the top of its class for support, comfort, and protection against further injury at a very competitive price for the feature set that it has at under £17. It is promoted as offering runners the ability to continue enjoying their favorite sports, even while living through chronic knee problems. Although the brace does not supply any cure for knee pain or injury, it has been said to help in a preventative measure for further pain or patella failure, and the company answers a variety of FAQs through their Amazon page for those with further questions on the design and functionality.
