Miami SEO Expert Launches Website For New Miami SEO Company, Social Aware Marketing

June 18, 2015

June 18, 2015 -
Leonardo Schwartz, who is the CEO of SocialAware Marketing, has announced that they have recently launched a new website for this company. Leonardo stated that the goal of SocialAware Marketing is to provide high quality SEO and marketing services to local businesses all over the US, even though the company is headquartered in Miami and NYC.

SocialAware Marketing stated that after months of careful planning, the new website is now completely ready to service clients in all areas of SEO and marketing. In addition, Leonardo Schwartz's SEO articles have been published on the website, and all visitors are encouraged to read their latest article called "6 Insidious Lies Bad SEO Guys Pushed You To Believe", which is featured on the homepage.

Leonardo Schwartz stated that the featured article provide some excellent insight into what all marketers should expect from search engine optimization and Internet marketing. He added that SocialAware Marketing bases all of their principles that are discussed in the article. One example that he feels marketers need to understand from the beginning is the first "SEO Lie" that other companies want their clients to believe, which is that they can get to the first page of Google within 30 days. The featured article replies with the following,

"There are a lot of content that needs to be written and distributed through the best suited channels, customers reviews that have to be gotten, Press Releases to send out, social signals that need to be intelligently produced in order to feed all of your web properties with them, and an awful bunch more of "exposure work" to carry out. All of this takes time to do -if you want it to be done the right way anyways - and, even if you were able to do it quicker. YOU MUST NOT!"

Social Aware Marketing said that their team of SEO Experts has all the experience needed to help businesses get the right results online. They continuously keep up-to-date with Google's latest algorithm changes, and a good part of their time is spent testing new search engine optimization techniques to help improve on the excellent results that they achieve for their clients. The company added that all of their efforts are focused only on White Hat SEO practices, because they understand how much time, money and energy is spent in to building and nurturing a business. Nobody likes to be suspended or banned from Google, and if a business is going to pay another service to help them in their marketing efforts, then that help should never be a hinder.

Social Aware Marketing warns marketers to stay away from companies that guarantee them a first spot on Google. They also made the following statement in their featured article,

"There is no way on Earth someone can guarantee something like that. At least that person is google itself. Of course, many of these SEO's speculate with the fact that they always can meet this kind of stupid guarantee just by getting your site on the first spot of Google.com for any obscure search term nobody is going to search for ever."

The company is very excited about the launch of their new website and urges all interested parties to pay them a visit online. Here, they will be able to get full details on all the services SocialAware Marketing offers. The company added that if clients have any further questions, they are encouraged to contact them by email.
