August 25, 2017 -
New York, New York - People see their cosmetic surgeon for a tummy tuck in Manhattan for a variety of reasons. A tummy tuck can help patients regain a youthful look and energy or to put the finishing touches on a diet and exercise regimen. Studies are starting to show that these results have also been shown to lead to greater success in the workplace, says Dr. Daniel Kaufman.

According to recent studies, attractive people earn an average of 3 to 4% more than less attractive peers. This is true across the board, not only in fields like sales and hospitality where good looks can draw in clients. The results of a tummy tuck or liposuction in Manhattan do not guarantee similar success but the confidence gained from looking better and feeling better about oneself is helpful at work.

People who are more confident and more attractive have the additional advantage of making a good first impression. Another recent study showed that people considered more attractive are considered more successful by 27% of people involved in an experiment where they based their opinions solely on appearances.

Dr. Kaufman says the newfound energy and self-confidence many people experience after a simple cosmetic procedure like at tummy tuck can go a long way in contributing to success in all facets of life, from the workplace to social situations.

Those considering breast augmentation or an abdominoplasty in Manhattan, can schedule an appointment with Dr. Daniel Kaufman to get you set up with a tailored treatment plan.
