Derrick Bohn, spokesperson for the company KnivesShipFree.com, has announced that they have recently published an original article on their website that emphasizes their line of Benchmade Griptilian knives. The reason for this latest publication is to showcase the quality craftsmanship of this knife, which KnivesShipFree.com feels has deservedly achieved "classic" status.

Derrick agreed that they were many contenders, but they felt that the Benchmade Griptilian knives had something a bit more refreshing to offer. In the article, which is titled "Benchmade's Griptilian: 21st Century Classic", the company describes the knife as follows,

"Once in the hand, the Griptilian offers serious, well, grip. A palm swell, along with the handle's texture and contours, inspires confidence. And to complete the knife's friendly ergonomics, the Griptilian's balance is smack-dab on the first finger -- and that's very rare, in our view, for a production folder."

The Benchmade Griptilians were introduced in 2001. Various knife experts, which in this case the article agrees, stated that during that time the world was in need of innovation, and that the Benchmade Griptilians were able to meet that need.

The article provides an overview on the Benchmade Griptilian knives, and the writer gives their opinion on their overall craftsmanship and performance. The overall point of view of the writer is that Griptilians are not only affordable, but also well-designed and well-made. This can be seen in the following excerpt taken from the publication,

"We've worked our 556 Grip pretty hard -- in the garage and in the office, from the woods to the garden -- and it's never complained."
