Fort Lauderdale, Florida: WyldLife Pets, a company that provides natural treats for pets, has released new information regarding the benefits of using bully sticks for pet dogs as a part of its latest campaign for pet health awareness.

According to Colin Campbell, a spokesperson for the company, "Natural is always better - both for human beings as well as their pets. If you want to take good care of your dog, it is important to provide them with the right diet that fulfills their nutritional requirements. Bully sticks, such as ones made by our company, are a great alternative to the other dog treats available in the market."

Unlike mass produced dog treats, bully sticks are easily digestible as opposed to rawhide which can be difficult to digest for some dogs (because of the beef hide). Bully sticks easily break down in a dog's stomach and don't splinter off during digestion, thus minimizing the risks of any internal injuries.

Bully sticks are also extremely healthy for dogs as they are only made of high-protein beef muscle. Beef is a complete source of amino acids that are integral to the healthy growth of a dog's muscles, brain, skin, and coat. For dogs with any allergy or food sensitivity, bully sticks are a natural dog chew option, as they are free from artificial chemicals, additives, and preservatives.

Bully sticks can also help in maintaining a dogs' dental hygiene. Considering the inflammation of gums is a common disease that afflicts most dogs, giving them tough bully sticks to chew on can increase their gum strength and remove any plaque and buildup before it has any chance to stick.

It is important for dog owners to select the right bully sticks for their pets which are free of any harmful preservatives or artificial ingredients. For those interested in learning more about natural dog treats, visit WyldLife Pets' official website or check out its Amazon storefront.
