September 21, 2017

September 21, 2017 -
Rip Toned Fitness has recently announced that their popular weightlifting straps in the U.S. are now available to customers in Italy via the Amazon marketplace. Originally released in the United States, the straps became so popular that the company stated they are now planning to offer them to a global audience.

Mark Pasay, a representative for the company says, "It didn't take long for our weightlifting straps to become a widespread sensation on Amazon in the United States. We felt that it was time to open up the market and offer these products to customers in Italy and other countries."

Pasay says that while injuries in weightlifting are common, these injuries can often be avoided by using products designed to help keep lifting loads balanced and wrists in the proper position for lifting. He states that the lifting straps offered by Rip Toned Fitness are designed specifically to make it safer to lift, helping to combat most of the problems that often lead to lifting injuries. He says that the straps are now available on Amazon.it and join other products recently released by the company on the Italian based Amazon marketplace.

Since their initial launch on the Amazon marketplace, the weightlifting straps have become one of the most popular fitness products in the United States and Pasay says that it was only a matter of time before Rip Toned decided to release these and their other products in other countries. The company offers a wide selection of weightlifting products that are designed to help lifters reap more benefits and experience fewer issues when lifting. Those interested can learn more about the lifting straps and other products offered by the company by visiting them on their official Amazon sellers pages in the United States, Italy, Spain, and France.

"We want everyone to enjoy the benefits of our fitness and weightlifting products," Pasay says. "In addition to offering our products on a number of global sites, we are also providing YouTube videos that show you how to use lifting straps so that you avoid injuries and get the most from your lifting sessions."
