

Rip Toned Wrist Wraps Launched On Canadian Market

September 27, 2017

September 27, 2017 -
Popular fitness accessories manufacturer Rip Toned Fitness has announced that their wrist wraps, which were originally released in the United States on Amazon, are now available in Canada. The Las Vegas, Nevada company has recently announced that they are now offering their popular Rip Toned wrist wraps for purchase on Amazon Canada.

Mark Pasay, a representative for the company says, "Our wrist wraps are all the rage on the United States market, so we decided to try them out on the Canadian market."

Pasay says that ever since they had launched in Canada just a short while ago, the Rip Toned wrist wraps have become quite popular. He states that much of this popularity is due to the top notch quality of the product, while a portion is because the purchase of the wrist wraps also entitles customers to added benefits.

"Not only do you get a high quality product," says Pasay. "But we also include a number of web content and video tutorials that help you to ensure that you are using them properly."

Pasay points out that the included tutorials help users to avoid injuries that are common with weightlifting. The wrist wraps help to provide support and balance when lifting to ensure that the wrists are not strained or otherwise injured.

Rip Toned Fitness offers a number of weightlifting and fitness support products and many of these products have been released recently to other markets, aside from the American Amazon marketplace. Pasay says that they recently released the wrist wraps onto the German and French markets as well and states that they have launched additional products in other countries in an effort to help lifters all over the world to maximize the results that they get when working out.

In addition to their best selling wrist wraps, the company has also released their lifting belt in other countries and states that they are working on offering even more products in these markets in the coming months. Those interested in learning more about Rip Toned Fitness and the array of weightlifting products that they offer can do so by visiting them online or on their Amazon sellers page at Amazon.ca.
