Rip Toned Fitness is a weightlifting and fitness product manufacturer based in Las Vegas, Nevada. The company provides a number of products designed to help weightlifters to maximize their workouts while avoiding injury. A representative for the company has recently announced that two of their most popular products on the U.S. Amazon marketplace are now available in Canada. The Rip Toned lifting straps and wrist wraps are now available for purchase through the Amazon Canada marketplace.

Company representative Mark Pasay says, "We are proud to announce that our products are now available to customers in Canada. Not only do you get this amazing combo that has been all the rave in the United States, but you can also read some web content and view a video tutorial that show you how to properly use them."

Pasay states that since the product combo was launched on the Canadian website of Amazon, they have also become quite popular in that country. He says that customers who have purchased the products through Amazon Canada have written positive reviews raving about everything from the design of the wraps and straps to the support provided by the company.

"We design all of our products to help you," says Pasay. "This particular combo of products became an instant sensation when we released it on the Amazon site here in the United States so we're not really surprised that they are such a hit already in Canada."

Pasay says that the included web content and tutorials help customers to ensure that they are lifting properly, which removes a lot of the concerns of injuries when weightlifting. He states that customers in the United States raved about the combo of products and wrote many positive reviews, which prompted the company to release it to other countries, as they have many of their products over the past few months.

In addition to the lifting straps and wrist wraps, Rip Toned Fitness has also released their popular lifting belt and various other products to customers in Canada, Germany, France, and other countries around the world. The company states that they plan to offer as many products to as many regions as they can to help weightlifters around the world to reach their maximum potential.

Those in Canada who need more information can visit the Rip Toned Fitness page at Amazon.ca.
