Las Vegas, Nevada based Rip Toned Fitness announced recently that the lifting straps that have been specifically designed for smaller wrists and have been popular on the American Amazon market, are now available in Canada. The company's Amazon bestseller lifting straps for smaller wrists offers not only a top notch product, but also provides customers some guidelines to help them throughout their workouts.

Mark Pasay, a representative for Rip Toned Fitness, says, "These lifting straps for normal or small wrists instantly became a hit on the United States market, so we decided to try them out on other markets. We are pleased to announce that they are now all the rave in Canada as well as the United States."

Pasay says that the wrist wraps are designed to fit those who normally have a difficult time finding a good fit. Since they are designed for normal to smaller sized wrists, they offer much more support than many other brands for those who are smaller in stature. The company states that they have realized that not everyone who lifts weights is a heavyweight, so they designed these particular wrist wraps to fit those who are just starting out or those who have smaller frames in general.

Pasay adds, "Our video tutorials will help you to know without a doubt that you are using the wrist wraps properly. We aim to help our customers to avoid injuries and these wrist wraps are designed to hold your wrists securely, giving you more balance and support while you lift."

Pasay points out that while the wrist wraps have been released on Amazon Canada just a short while ago, they have already begun to receive positive reviews from Canadian customers. Customers are commenting on the support that they are receiving from the wrist supports and the company states that they plan to offer these products in additional countries as well. They previously released other lifting products in Canada as well as Italy, Germany and other regions, in their attempt to bring their products to a worldwide market. Pasay says that so far, the release of their lifting products in other countries has been a successful venture.

Those in Canada who need more information about the lifting straps can visit the Rip Toned Fitness web page on Amazon.ca.
