Las Vegas, Nevada based Rip Toned Fitness has recently announced that their popular elbow sleeves are now available in France. The company originally released the Rip Toned elbow sleeves onto the United States market, where they became a near instant hit. Due to their popularity, the company has now decided to offer them in other countries.

Mark Pasay, a representative for Rip Toned Fitness, says, "These elbow sleeves gained a large number of positive reviews on Amazon from our United States based customers. Because of that, we thought it was time to open them up to a more global customer base."

Pasay says that this decision has paid off as the sleeves are now quite popular in France, having already gained the company a number of positive reviews on the Amazon France web page for the company. The elbow sleeves are designed to help those who are weightlifting to avoid injury and maximize their workouts by offering support in a crucial area. Pasay states that the sleeves have become very popular with weight and power lifters throughout the United States and says that he fully believes that they will be a worldwide sensation.

"We have launched them in France," says Pasay, "As well as Italy, Germany, Spain and Canada. We hope to be able to help everyone who lifts by offering support through our products. In addition, your purchase includes not only our top notch Rip Toned elbow sleeves, but a number of additional bonuses as well."

Pasay says that those bonuses include web content that can help weightlifters to ensure that they are always lifting properly to avoid injury. In addition to the content, the company is also providing access to a number of video tutorials that will also help to ensure that the products are being used properly so as to avoid injury and maximize a lifter's time in the gym.

Pasay says that the web content and tutorials are available instantly upon purchase and urges those who are lifting weights to check the information to ensure that they are doing their best to avoid injury and give themselves a better chance at reaching their lifting goals.
