Las Vegas, Nevada based Rip Toned Fitness is a company that provides high quality fitness products. Originally released in the United States, the company has recently stated that they are opening up the market for their products and including a number of additional countries. One of their most popular products, the Rip Toned elbow sleeves, are now available in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Liechtenstein and Luxembourg.

Mark Pasay, a spokesperson for the company, says, "We design these products to help lifters to not only make the most of their sessions, but to avoid common injuries as well. You don't want to lose your grip when lifting and you don't want to twist wrong and injure yourself, potentially quite seriously. Our goal is to help you to lift better and safer."

Pasay says that the popular elbow sleeves also offer another benefit. He states that each purchase entitles customers to a host of web content and tutorials that will help them to ensure that they are properly using the products. Weightlifting champion Kevin Weiss has contributed to a number of the company's videos, helping weightlifters to gain the most benefit from their workouts while avoiding things like sprained wrists and elbows and other injuries that can be incurred by dropping or shifting weights.

"We are excited to be getting these products out to weightlifters all over the world," says Pasay. "Weightlifting is a very popular sport and because of that, we wanted to reach lifters with products and instructions on getting the body that they want without injury."

Pasay says that by nature, weightlifters push themselves which involves physical strength as well as a firm grip. He says that all of the products offered by Rip Toned Fitness are designed to help lifters to get a better grip when lifting which leads to a more beneficial workout and a lower risk of injury.

The company's popular elbow sleeves can now be purchased throughout Europe on Amazon.de. They are also still available on the United States Amazon marketplace and have currently been released in other areas as well including Germany, France, Spain, Italy and Canada.
