Foxbrim Announces That Their Orange Blossom Water Toner Is Exceptional For Combination Skin Types

June 24, 2015

June 24, 2015 -
Troy Johnston, spokesperson for the company Foxbrim, has announced that the Orange Blossom Water Toner bottled and sold by the company is exceptional for all skin types. He added that the toner balances pH levels, which it does by providing a mild acidity.

The Orange Blossom Water Toner from Foxbrim is said to have skin healing and nourishing properties that is able to restore the vitality and suppleness of skin. The company said that their product will help reduce pore size and smooth skin in the process. The orange Blossom water toner also acts as a natural moisturizer. It does this through its natural acidity formula, which is able to balance pH levels, thus making it safe to use multiple times per day.

Troy Johnston said that their toner is alcohol free. This is good news for those who have sensitive skin because alcohol never does very well with this skin type. For customers who have acne prone skin, they will be able to enjoy the toner's astringent and anti-inflammatory properties. He added that the goal of the company was to provide an all-natural toner that was able to create a healthy environment to allow skin to become supple and nourished. To date, there are over 600 positive customer reviews for this product on Amazon. In one example, a customer wrote the following review about the product,

"Lovely, amazing fragrance and feels great on my sensitive skin! I use this toner to clean and clarify my face prior to using my serum and moisturizer. It leaves my skin feeling clean but not stripped of natural oils. I also add a little of this toner to my facial masks to give them an extra boost. I've had excellent results with this item and HIGHLY RECOMMEND for all skin types! I received this product in exchange for my honest review and my opinions are my own."

Foxbrim stated that they are grateful for all the positive feedback from the customers, and they will continue to provide a high-quality product that is perfect for even the most sensitive skin. They added, however, that at times a shortage of available inventory might occur, because the company is taking all measures to responsibly source all of their ingredients. They stated that because of this, when the Blossom Water Toner is available, they encourage the customers to secure a bottle as soon as possible.

Troy Johnston said that they have a lot of confidence in their toner, and to show this they are offering all of their customers a full, no questions asked refund if they are not satisfied with their purchase. For those who would like to read the long list of positive reviews customers have written on their product, please visit their Amazon storefront. In addition to Foxbrim's orange Blossom water toner being sold on Amazon, it is Available on Their Website, and customers will also be able to get more details on other products sold by the company. Here, interested parties can also contact them directly if they have any further questions.
