Dr. Schreiber Examines the Ways a Mommy Makeover Can Be Beneficial at Work in a New Blog

December 18, 2017

December 18, 2017 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Baltimore, MD - Dr. Jeffrey Schreiber, a cosmetic surgeon at Baltimore Plastic and Cosmetic Surgery Center recently posted a new blog that discusses mommy makeovers and how they can be helpful when returning to work. He explains that many new mothers believe that a cosmetic procedure can help them feel better about themselves but are unaware of other benefits.

In the post, the doctor quotes recent studies about the pay differences between people considered attractive and those who are not as well as other statistics related to success at interviews. He delves further into the subject to correlate self-confidence with greater achievement in the office.

Dr. Schreiber says he is careful in the blog not to guarantee major changes at work due to procedures, but wants patients, especially new mothers, to be aware that he believes many of the procedures he offers can be helpful in more than just superficial ways. He hopes that readers of his blog will gain a new perspective on the subject by hearing the words of a professional. More information on the benefits of mommy makeovers, as well as information on other cosmetic procedures, can be found at <http://www.baltimoreplasticsurgery.com> on Dr. Schreiber's blog.

Aside from simply offering advice on maintaining liposuction results, Dr. Schreiber also briefly explains the best ways for patients to prepare for the procedure. The doctor explains that an important part of achieving results that will last is being appropriately prepared and in good health heading into the surgery. More information about liposuction and other cosmetic procedures is available at the Baltimore Plastic and Cosmetic Surgery Center's blog at <http://www.baltimoreplasticsurgery.com>.
