June 28, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Las Vegas, NV based company, Garden Goodness, has announced that their Landscape Staples may be a necessity this summer for yard landscaping and gardening, especially for those hoping to erect a fence or make use of shrubbery. The company offers this product through their online sales channel for $15.99, and supplies consumers with a package of 100 pins. Currently they hold high ratings online by individuals who have already tried the product; one such satisfied customer said: "Anyone who gardens needs these! This is a great item with a million uses from holding down tarps and landscaping fabric to many other outdoor uses. Good for irrigation hoses, bird netting, etc. They are sturdy, thick and long enough for heavy usage. They have pointy ends to be able to push them through the soil easily. They hold down heavy items and do not bend in the wind."

Also known as garden spikes, fence anchors, garden pins, sod staples, and landscape fabric staples, the tools are made from heavy duty steel, which is described by the company as being extra-sturdy. This is an important characteristic of this particular landscaping product, as they are often beat into the earth with a hammer to retain the necessary grounding of lawn decorations, fences, and other landscaping needs. Another important element that these landscape staples possess is their precise dimensions, which means that every staple is created to the exact right size and shape for use around the yard. Garden Goodness promises that unlike lesser products from competitors, these pins will always work the same way, offering support and security in yard care. Another satisfied customer explained: "These staples originally were made to hold sod down. The staples work like a tent stake, but in my opinion, these are easier to use and easier to remove. These staples are a great value for the price and every home needs to keep these on hand for odd projects! Best of all, they are made in the USA! I love them!"

The landscape staples are six inches in length, which the company says supplies a long and strong hold that won't slip up easily or cause damage in normal levels of wind and rain. The ends are sharp for the convenience of positioning and ease of insertion into the soil, and Garden Goodness has been open in their commitment to the high quality of work which has gone into creating these products. In fact, the company believes so strongly in the pegs, and are so committed to their customers, that with the purchase of these tools they also offer a 7 year guarantee, during which individuals who have purchased the staples can return those that went unused and the package for a full refund.

Dimensions, uses, and photos of the product can be viewed through the company's online sales page. Here consumers can read further reviews from satisfied customers, leave their own comments, check the FAQs answered by the Garden Goodness, and purchase the landscape staples for themselves.
