1BuyLand 2BuySea, a company based out of South Dakota, has announced that their back brace belt, the Ortho Back-Up, provides the necessary lower back support to help reduce flare ups of chronic back pain so users can enjoy everyday activities without fear of overexerting themselves. The belt works by improving neurological flow and reducing the compression of the lumbar region to allow for better circulation and spine stability. The company has said the following regarding the product and how it works to help those using it: "The unique design of Ortho Back-Up Belt helps manage lower back pain by creating a counter-force pressure that reduces load on all the vital points, properly utilizing your own muscles to stabilize your lower back without you even noticing it."

The back support brace was designed by a doctor to act as an aid in the prevention of injury. It is meant to hold the body and offer lower back support in a way that creates a safe and pain reduced position for faster healing and less chance of additional aching. The brace is lightweight and described as comfortable to wear, even during long periods. With sturdy straps, the product was built for durability and years of use without fail. One satisfied customer offered the following review: "I have so many back problems that I can't list them all. I also have many back braces which do nothing. This brace is fantastic. It is adjustable easily and lets me not take medications with their side effects. My mother now has one as does her neighbor. I can't say enough good things about this price. No surgery for me!"

One problem that reportedly occurs while wearing other braces of this nature is the inability to reach all levels of movement. Ortho Back Up has stated that this back brace does not impede movement as other competitor brands does, and instead offers fully adjustable Velcro straps which can be fitted in ten different ways which fit waist sizes from 25" to 54". It offers so much mobility that it can be used in simple tasks like gardening at home, or in more active pursuits. In fact, the company has stated that it can be worn without even hindering a golf swing. Ortho Back Up explains: "It is not squeezing you out of breath and neither is it too weak. The unique components and design makes it possible to provide the perfect blend of support and freedom."

The Ortho Back Up support belt is registered through the FDA and is Medicare approved, and each purchase includes an eBook titled, "Relieve Your Annoying Back Pain and Correct Your Posture Within A Week." The belt also comes with a lifetime satisfaction guarantee, and dissatisfied customers can contact the company for a full money back refund with no questions asked if they find that the product is not to their liking.

The back brace belt is available on Amazon from 1BuyLand 2BuySea and they encourage those who suffer from back pain to try the device for themselves, and suggest that with the money back guarantee, there is nothing to lose but a pain in the back.
