Cruvina, providers of shatterproof plastic glassware, announces that their stemless wine glasses are reusable.

Erin Moore, Co-Founder of Cruvina, shares "Most of us don't own large collections of lead crystal glassware. But when we throw a party, we want to do it in style while staying cost-efficient. Much of the plastic drinkware available is either unattractive or so flimsy that it easily breaks. At Cruvina one of our goals is to help those hosting parties create an aesthetic atmosphere on a budget, so we decided to design plastic glasses that were both beautiful and reusable to fit the needs of modern entertaining."

After researching many different kinds of plastics, the designers at Cruvina found that Tritan plastic manufactured by Eastman had all of the qualities they were looking for. Tritan plastic has a clarity and shine that makes it look like "real" glass. When this plastic is molded into a design that fits comfortably into the hand, the result is an aesthetic drinking experience similar to that of using crystal glassware. At the same time, Tritan plastic is very strong. So glasses made from it are virtually shatter-proof and won't break if they are accidentally dropped or knocked over. The plastic is both odor-resistant and scratch-resistant so the wine glasses will stand up to years of drinking, washing, and reusing, staying clear and clean.

Cruvina wine glasses have a stemless design, which means that the bowl has a flat bottom that sits firmly on surfaces. This makes them more stable so they won't be able to be knocked over easily. The classic design makes the glasses appropriate for any kind of drinks, from wine or cocktails to soda, juice or water. And because they don't break easily, they can be safely used by children.

Says Ms. Moore, "These glasses fit the bill for today's party host. They are beautiful so that they can be used in any setting, from formal cocktail party to outdoor bar-b-que. And they are practical, because they can be washed and reused time and again, thereby saving money."

Each box comes with four 13-ounce glasses. Cruvina wine glasses are available on Amazon and come with a 30-day money-back guarantee.
