The Austin Vision Therapy Center, based in Austin, TX, is a center that prides itself on being accessible and helping people in the Austin area have the best eye care possible. They are proud to announce that they have received a new rave review from a happy patient. What sets this review apart is that it is in relation to a seven year old child.

Dr. Denise Smith from the Austin Vision Therapy Center says: "We want to be there for everybody in Austin, regardless of their age. Working with the very young is always interesting, because they are often quite anxious and don't know what to expect. We're very happy to hear that one of our little patients was so impressed with Dr. Bailey."

The Austin Vision Therapy Center offers a range of eye treatment services. As shown on the clinic's website, austinvisiontherapycenter.com/, these services are categorized into vision therapy, vision and learning, and amblyopia or lazy eye. They quite regularly work with very young people, making a huge difference in their overall quality of life and learning. At all times, the clinic offers an honest assessment of what is needed and how that can benefit their patients, which is precisely what stood out in the latest review.

In it, Lynea P. says: "I brought my 7 year old daughter in for an initial consultation. Dr. Bailey made her feel so comfortable. She repeatedly told me, in the short 30 minutes we were there, "I love this place. Can we come back." She even ran across the room to give Dr. Bailey a big hug before we left. It's important to me that she feels comfortable with this process, and I know that would be the case here. Dr. Bailey was very patient in the consultation, and gave me his honest assessment of why he thought she could benefit from vision therapy."

According to Dr. Denise Smith, it is common for children to become much happier after having undergone vision therapy. Specifically, they perform better academically and with their peers. Being able to influence overall quality of life to such a degree is something the clinic is incredibly proud of.
