March 03, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Portland, Ore. - Carlos Delefunte, staffing manager from a leading staffing agency in Portland, OR, has recently been featured on Express Employment Professionals job blog. At Express, the recruiters interview numerous job seekers every day so they know what works and what doesn't, at both the staffing agency and client levels. Carlos was asked to contribute his thoughts for the article "How to Impress a Recruiter?", fittingly. The blog article gave helpful tips and advice to job seekers on how they can make the best impression in their respective interviews and to their recruiters.

Express East Portland Managing Partner Sara Moriarty stated, "The talented recruiters on my team advocate for job seekers and are able to paint a broader picture of a candidate's qualifications and strengths. Thus the candidates we represent become more than a resume on a piece of paper. Using the tips and advice contained within this article, a job seeker is able to position themselves as top talent in the area and develop a relationship with their recruiter. This allows our recruiters the ability to effectively market them out to over 300 companies that we have established relationships with in the East Portland business community."

The employment agency in Portland, OR, have expertise in the field of placing good people into superior jobs that are best suited for their qualifications. Carlos contributed specifically to the importance of a positive attitude in a job seeker. He advised that a candidate should be friendly and personable because their interview is usually the first chance to make a lasting first impression.

?I like candidates that have friendly, personable attitudes,? said Carlos Delafuente from the Express East Portland office. ?I should be able to tell that they are reliable, punctual, and dependable. They can impress me by showing that they can hold a normal conversation, that they have a sense of humor, and optimism.?
