SEO Houston Pros Shifts To People To People Marketing

March 14, 2018 -
SEO Houston Pros, a digital marketing agency in Houston, TX, is shifting gears with the establishment of a new people to people marketing department. Catering to programmatic marketing and true people to people marketing, the new department is already attracting a lot of attention. Indeed, the agency believes that the so-called 'pre-emptive people to people marketing' is the new marketing strategy to watch.

Garrett Laidler from SEO Houston Pros says: "Are you sick of every other marketer and their brother shoving the next best thing down your throat, promising it's going to bring you leads and more business? We promise that we are going to change your business and we offer the real deal. We have a foolproof way to get you in front of your potential clients before they even know they were going to use you."

The Houston SEO expert's method is based on strategies and tactics that some of the world's biggest businesses have been using for the past decade, without everyday consumers being aware of it. Naturally, these big businesses also have huge budgets to achieve that by gathering all the necessary data. SEO Houston Pros, however, has changed all of that. Garrett Laidler explains: "We are one of 10 agencies nationwide that have 96% of the entire world's search data online. We have an artificial intelligence software that can track trends pre-emptively, thereby putting the right message in front of your clients before they even look for it."

Ninety-six percent of the world's data searches online equates to 1.5 trillion searches and pixel fires each month. SEO Houston Pros tracks 1.2 billion websites, 225 million daily active users, and 2,700 different data sets. They know like no other that data controls everything and have developed a software that can pinpoint existing and upcoming trends, which clients can then respond to.

Laidler says: "The strategy is to put yourself in front of the people you know are about to use your service. This will not only get you in front of your potential clients before your competitors, but it refines your target audience."

Houston SEO Pros' expertise is clearly visible through their numerous Yelp reviews.
