Small Business CEO, a new, nationwide, business organization based in Laurel, Maryland, has been launched to offer a new resource to small business owners to help in their efforts to grow and thrive.

Glenn Garnes, founder of Small Business CEO, says: "Whether you're a startup or early stage business or you've been around awhile, Small Business CEO offers you the right tools and education to power your business to success. Membership includes online courses and access to business mentors and experts as part of it."

When a business becomes a member, they are interviewed on Small Business CEO TV either in their own TV studio in Laurel or by remote video feed. This TV show is used to promote the business to other business owners and customers.

Every member also receives a mobile responsive, one page website on the Small Business CEO website. Glenn Garnes continues: "Our members also receive a virtual business card that can be shared at business events. Our member map will also link to the one page website we provide, which means other members can easily find you and connect."

He continues: "Think of us as a fusion of a small business think tank and a business fraternity, where you access business tools and resources, and colleagues."

Garnes, who is a retired business attorney, knows the importance of having access to the right resources in business, which is why he carefully chose to assemble a business resource toolkit that forms the backbone of membership in Small Business CEO. "I wanted to give other business owners access to the things I found valuable in building my law practice and other businesses and I wanted it to be affordable," Garnes explains. "I think we've achieved that with how we have structured the organization."

The organization facilitates growth through collaboration, education and communication with other members. "Imagine a nationwide organization of small business owners, raising their business I.Q.'s through continuing education, then widening their circle of influence with quality connections to other members. That's Small Business CEO," explains Garnes.

Small Business CEO is currently being launched around the country and is offering a preferred lifetime membership and pricing to the first 20 businesses in each state. After the first 20 memberships are claimed pricing will be monthly or annual depending on the selected option.
