June 30, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Las Vegas, NV based company TATEMS, has announced that their Fleet Maintenance Software is so easy to use that it may shock those using it. The company is reportedly known for their unique modern take on software distribution to companies with fleet transport to manage, and allows businesses to take advantage of a free trial offer to better understand just how simple and essential their software can be. The company can be found online at <http://tatems.com>, where they supply a quick demo of how the software works, as well as a thorough breakdown of individual services accomplished with the product. They have said the following regarding their free trial:

"You will not need to re-enter the data you have been working with during your free trial, you'll simply continue with what you have already entered after you have purchased your license(s) and received your registration key(s). After purchase, simply submit the serial number, computer name and version number that displays on the TATEMS Registration screen so that we can generate and send you your registration key(s), to permanently unlock your software on the computer(s) you installed it on."

Aside from the information available on the main website, TATEMS also offers a number of online articles through their blog, which is located at <http://tatems.com/blog> This is promoted as a great place for those who are new to TATEMS to learn about different ways that the software works, and gain insight and tips on better managing a fleet. The software is said to assist with work orders, fuel logs, Fuel and Service PMS, parts inventory, DOT and CHP bit inspections, as well as reminders for important dates and activities. They explain:

"You get reminders popups that are printable for Lube/Services, 90 Day Inspections, Pending Work Orders, Permits/Inspections, Needed Repairs, Taxes and Registration, Parts Inventory and Drivers License Renewals and Driver Physicals."

Visiting <http://tatems.com/purchase.cfm> explains the Silver Basic and Gold Super packages, pricing, inclusions, as well as a supply of FAQs for those who still have questions or concerns. TATEMS also invites businesses and individuals to use the contact information on their site to get in touch if they are considering utilizing the software but need to know more about how it could fit their company specifically. While the Silver package offers a number of incentives along with the software itself, the Gold package does have a few bonuses, which the company believes are well worth the additional cost.

TATEMS supplies various different tutorials, which are aimed toward new users of the software, or for potential new users. This offers further support that the ease of this software surpasses that of the competition, as TATEMS believes. The company is currently holding a very high ranking among their clients with a number of positive reviews which are available online. The company has been open regarding their passion for creating easy to use software at affordable prices, and this seems to be reflected in the multiple customer reactions and responses on their site. They invite businesses to read these and leave their own so that TATEMS can continue to evolve and improve.
