Adam elements, a leading brand in smart electronic products, announces the addition of OMNIA TA502, a compact travel power adapter and converter able to connect in over 150 countries. It is specifically designed for people on the go who value convenience.

"We created a sleek, yet durable design where users are only required to press-and-slide out the prongs to plug it into the desired socket," an Adam spokesperson said. "OMNIA TA502 is a small adapter that easily fits anywhere without taking up much space, making it the best option for travelers."

Users can power up to three devices due to the adapter's two USB ports and socket. The adapter has three prongs that properly connect to many sockets around the world. The prongs can easily be extended and retracted by pressing-and-sliding the small controls on the side.

OMNIA comes with its own complimentary storage pouch made of soft fabric designed to keep the adapter protected. In addition, it has two small LED lights which light up on the socket side that showcase the charging status of devices. It can safely charge iOS, Android, Windows, DJI Drones, and GoPro devices thanks to its BC1.2 technology installed which auto-detects the amount of amperage needed.

Another useful piece of technology the travel adapter offers is the built-in safety fuse in charge of protecting user's devices from damages caused by unpredictable over-current. OMNIA TA502 is offered in 4 color combinations and is now available on amazon.com.
