

Austin Pediatric Eye Care Center Blog Discusses What Happens During a Vision Therapy Session

May 16, 2018

May 16, 2018 -
Austin, TX - Austin Vision Therapy Center?s latest blog explains what transpires during a typical vision therapy session. The center explains that while people are becoming more aware of the benefits of vision therapy, not everyone knows what to expect prior to beginning a session.

The Austin vision center states vision therapy is individualized and each plan will be tailored to a child?s specific vision problem or problems, but there are some commonalities among most sessions. For example, sessions typically last 45 minutes to an hour and are done weekly or bi-weekly, depending on the program, with programs ranging from several months to years depending on the number and severity of visual deficits.

The post at http://austinvisiontherapycenter.com further explains that vision therapy is a progressive program that is done in the office, at home, or both, and addresses vision problems that cannot be addressed by glasses or contact lenses alone. It is tailored to an individual?s specific vision problem and overseen by a developmental optometrist. The doctors believe that the more the public is aware of the benefits of vision therapy, the more positive change can be affected by it.

Austin Vision Therapy Center diagnoses and treats a variety of vision problems. Greater visual success can lead to an overall better life. To schedule an appointment or find answers to any vision or visual processing concerns, contact Austin Vision Therapy Center.
