July 05, 2018 -

Panama City, Fla. - As many in the local area are enjoying the beaches, vacations, and time away from school, Disaster Response Team is preparing for what could be the most severe hurricane season North America has ever seen. Damage restoration of Panama City, FL is a vital service in place to assure the local area that damage restoration services, emergency clean up, or complete reconstruction are a fast and reliable option.

Hurricane season is the period between June 1 - November 30 of this year. According to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, their outlook for the 2018 Atlantic storm season entails an average to above-average season this year, with 10-16 named storms and five to nine hurricanes, including one to four major hurricanes.

Storms are increasingly intensifying more quickly, with a greater chance they will drop record amounts of rain. In order to further their outreach to the local community, Disaster Response Team advises those in the local area or located anywhere hurricanes could possibly make landfall to take any and all precautions necessary. Preparing for hurricane season could include a multitude of tasks including getting familiar with evacuation routes to "storm-proofing" the home or business.

The Panama City emergency response team has technicians trained and certified by nationally-recognized restoration organizations such as the Institute of Inspection, Cleaning, and Restoration Certification (IICRC). Disaster Response Team is also a proud member of the Disaster Kleenup International (DKI) network. DKI is the largest property damage restoration organization in North America.

"It's important for us to warn the community of a possible severe hurricane season, especially if experts are predicting it to be a disastrous one," Disaster Response Team owner, Mark Broersma, stated. "Our main priority is the safety of our community, having everyone aware of the possibilities is the first step."
