Miller states that the company is an agency and that they will help list homes for sale, or find an ideal match. "There area a number of rental homes as well," states Miller. "For those in our service area who are looking to buy or rent, give us a call and let's see what we can do for you."

Their team of Maryland Realtors will help work to get fair market value whether buying or selling a home. Miller states that his team understands the market and process behind getting the most out of one?s real estate transaction. Miller says that they will always work as quickly as possible to get their clients through the process and enjoying the fruits of their labor as soon as possible.

"We offer a no obligation pricing commitment," says Miller. "That means that sellers are under absolutely no obligation to move forward with our offer, but it helps them to know what that offer is and what they can expect to get out of their homes." Miller says that because there is no waiting for financing and no worries of having to handle certain repairs or improvements, their process saves time for the homeowner and is very beneficial for those who need to move quickly. He states that homeowners who are relocating often use their services to finish their sale quickly so that they can get their move finished and have the funds on hand to purchase a new home when they arrive at their new destination.

Miller also says that the company offers a free guide that helps homeowners to better understand the pros and cons of selling their homes as well as the timeline that they can expect throughout the process. The guide is available for free download on the company's official website at <https://www.aehomegroup.com/maryland/>. It gives the advantages and disadvantages of placing a home for sale through a traditional realtor and offers information on the alternatives of doing so. Miller says for first time sellers, this guide can be a wonderful resource that will provide information that can help them to make a more informed decision about selling their home.

Miller states that the main benefit of working with the company, for homeowners, is that you will be represented by a real estate professional. Miller goes on to say, Buying or selling a house is something our clients will do a handful of times in their life at most. Our agents process these sort of real estate transactions every day and bring that experience to each new client.

Miller says that those who have any questions about the process, their service area or any other aspect of how AE Home Group works can give the company a call or visit them on their official website for a complete list of frequently asked questions and their answers.
