Dallas Foundation Contractor Provides Mudjacking Slab Foundation Repair

August 30, 2018

August 30, 2018 -

Texas Foundation Pros are pleased to announce that the services included in the portfolio of their firm includes repairs for various types of foundations and foundation repair procedures. Mudjacking is one of the procedures which are used to level existing foundations. The company has the knowledge and experience to take care of the need for foundation repairs.

Mudjacking repairs are also known as pressure grouting and more commonly as slabjacking, Mudjacking is a slab foundation repair process. When a concrete slab that has sunk needs to be lifted it can be easily and conveniently done with the help of pumping grout through the material. This process helps to push the concrete upward from below. This is a popular process which permits the repair to be done easily, but there are variations.

Different kinds of concrete can be utilized in slabjacking or mudjacking. Only an inspection and thorough assessment by the Dallas Texas Foundation Pros will permit them to determine the best choice of concrete. Some foundations require low-strength concrete while other properties warrant the use of polyurethane resins. The majority of mud jacking repairs makes use of concrete and steel piling.

A company spokesperson explains, "We are the top firm in Dallas in the industry. We are not just knowledgeable about the science and art of which is required. We have been delivering on our promises for three decades now.
