Energy Catchers, an exterior home solutions company based out of Wilmington, North Carolina, is proud to announce they are now the exclusive installer of copperfect radiant barrier insulation in the Wilmington area. The company says that now is the time to install the special insulation, as colder weather is right around the corner. The company can be found on Google Maps at <https://goo.gl/maps/VNTDDZU6oP92>.

Jay Dunbar from Energy Catchers says, "We're very proud to exclusively offer copperfect radiant barrier insulation to our customers in the Wilmington area. Like all of our products, it's made right here in America, and it offers a lot of perks that traditional insulation doesn't provide."

Copperfect radiant barriers are typically installed in the attic of the homes roof. Invented by NASA, copperfect radiant barriers are made with double-sided aluminized film that reflects heat outwards during hot weather and reflects it inside the home during colder weather. It is installed in the spaces where dust accumulation will be minimal, as dust would reduce the material's efficiency.

"Copperfect radiant barriers are amazing materials," Dunbar says. "Our customers have been really happy with such, especially because their energy bills are down all year round. Not only does the material retain 75% of energy created during the winter, it stops up to 97% of heat gain in your attic during the summer. It's completely non-toxic, and is immune to mold and mildew caused by humidity. It's even made right here in North Carolina, in Hickory."

Dunbar states that copperfect radiant barriers are easy to set up in the home. It usually only takes one day to install the material. "Our installers are highly-trained and professional, and will be in and out of your home with no fuss," Dunbar says. "When you talk to us, our staff will come to your home and give you a free analysis of the energy use in your home and will offer the best recommendations for you. We offer a lifetime guarantee on all of our services, so if anything happens to the products we install, we will come over and fix it for you with no service charge. You can't beat that deal."

Energy Catchers is a family owned and operated business that has over 20 years of experience in the Wilmington area. Along with insulation installation, they also offer porch and deck building, gutter and gutter protection, custom roofing systems, replacement windows and doors, and siding. They use materials made in the USA and guarantee all their work. The company has been accredited by HomeAdvisor, Good Housekeeping, NARI, and the Better Business Bureau.

The professionalism of The Energy Catchers staff is reflected in the consistent highly-rated reviews the company has gotten. Adam L. on Google Maps said, "Energy Catchers replaced every window in our home. After gathering several other estimates, Energy Catchers was our last stop. We signed up with Energy Catchers the day that Chris came out to our house. The windows really are a fantastic product, the price was better than most, and the process, from deposit until the install day was made crystal clear. From that day forward, everything proceeded smoothly. Everyone who came out from Energy Catchers was professional, friendly, and extremely competent. Installation was done in one day and the crew was very clean and tidy. Our windows have been in for two weeks. Using our Nest App, upgrading our windows has resulted in about 30% less A/C time, and the same temperature feels better. We are thrilled with how comfortable the house feels now and we look forward to spending less and using less power." Anna L. said, "Spent time when choosing the type of door I needed and wanted. Very informative demonstration at my home. Everyone I dealt with from point of sale to the installation including office staff were very friendly and professional. I was kept updated on everything as I had a special order that took a little longer. Love my door. Makes such a difference!"

Dunbar says, "We have the best customers and we're happy to serve them with any exterior home solution they need. Our philosophy is to give every customer a fair, honest quote, and our installers will treat you with respect, professionalism, and efficiency. At Energy Catchers, our motto is 'Keep Your Energy', and we stand by that motto with every installation."
