Edward O'Neill, President of Eon Wealth Management, a Long Island New York Investment Firm, was recently honored as one of Cetera Financial Specialists' top advisors. O'Neill was recognized at the firm's annual Connect conference, which annually brings together top advisors from across the country. Participants attending the conference left inspired with groundbreaking ways to drive business growth and continue serving their clients at unparalleled standards. This year's conference was a three-day event held at the Grand Hyatt San Antonio, and was packed with varied breakout sessions, endless networking opportunities with exhibitors and fellow Cetera Financial Specialists' advisors and terrific special events.

"This conference is always a fantastic opportunity to connect with my peers from around the country and being recognized among other top advisors is very rewarding," said O'Neill. "We heard some great presentations from Cetera Financial Specialists' executive team, as well as other keynote speakers. I enjoy that each session is tailored to my level of knowledge and learning objectives in different areas of financial services, ensuring that I'm equipped to continue providing the best service for my clients."

The conference also featured high-rated keynote speakers such as Greg Valliere, Chief Political Strategist at the Potomac Research Group. Valliere has more than 30 years of experience in coordinating political and economic research, and during the conference, touched upon everything from current key legislative issues to the 2016 presidential campaign. Mitch Anthony, founder and president of Advisor Insights at the Financial Life Planning Institute, the leading provider of financial life planning tools and programs, was also in attendance and made an impactful presentation on building a business model that benefits everyone involved. Other speakers were also in attendance.

Gregg Ruvoli, president of Cetera Financial Specialists, opened the 16th annual conference with top advisor recognition.

"Our advisors never cease to amaze us," said Ruvoli. "They continue to be top performers in the industry, as well as strong role models in their respective communities. We are thankful to be partners and to help support their success."
