

Clydesdale Cyclist Launches Their New Blog For Cyclists

July 02, 2015

July 02, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Clydesdale Cyclist, a new blog for cyclists is now live. The blog provides real cycling advice for those whose passion is cycling. This blog is definitely not just another review site.

The creator of the Clydesdale Cyclist site states on his first blog post that "I'm bigger than not just the average cyclist, but also the average person! So I have to buy gear that is good quality and going to last."

The blog will provide information and tips for cyclists about gear, particularly gear that is designed for the heavier rider. The Clydesdale Cyclist offers tips, not just for beginning cyclists, but for serious riders as well, catering to the entire cycling world. He will create videos to post to the blog, giving cyclists information about the latest in cycling gear from a number of competitive manufacturers, and he plans to "call out" any product or brand that does not do what it claims it will do. "When I find something I like I'm going to let you know. But at the same time if something doesn't measure up I'll speak out as well."

Cyclists who want to keep up-to-date with the latest news from the cycling world can also find the Clydesdale Cyclist on Twitter. The creator is an engineer by trade, which gives him insights into what products work properly and what may need to be tweaked in order to perform as they should. He claims that review sites are geared toward advertisers, not the real person. His blog will cater to real cyclists, not advertisers, so he is "no afraid to tell it like it is."

The Clydesdale Cyclist plans to show his viewers where they can get the best deals on the parts and equipment that they need, as well as how to fit and maintain any parts that they need to purchase. The blog is not about reviewing products exclusively. While he does plan to offer honest reviews of the products that he uses, he also plans to help cyclists, beginner and seasoned, to find lower cost equipment, maintain their bikes and other equipment, and generally better enjoy the world of cycling.

The blog is live now, with new posts being planned regularly and posted on Twitter, YouTube and the blog site.
