October 05, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Having bad credit means that there are a lot of doors closed in terms of opportunities for loans. People with poor credit have to settle for terms that are not as desirable, and this can cost a lot in the long run because of higher interest rates, etc.

A bad credit score is one that falls at or below 619 on the FICO score. With a bad credit score, securing a loan can be difficult. For example, auto loans are almost completely off the table. There's emphasis on the word "almost" because there are still plenty of options for those with bad credit scores.

J.D. Byrider in Saginaw has built their business by helping people get approved for auto loans even with bad credit. But they don't want someone to stay there. They want to empower people to be able to improve their life's situation.

It is possible to secure a loan even with bad credit. But there's an even better option available, and that is to improve one's credit score. Here are five easy ways to rebuild credit.

Secure a Loan through a Car Dealer like J.D. Byrider

Alternative financing car dealerships like J.D. Byrider offer buy here pay here auto loans that allow people with low credit scores to purchase high quality used vehicles. The low down payment rates and convenient payment options are only some of the benefits of working with J.D. Byrider in Saginaw, Michigan.

Also, working with this type of car dealer can also improve a credit score.

J.D. Byrider, in particular, reports all payments to three major credit bureaus so that buyers can improve their credit score over time. These credit bureaus recognize the regular payments being made, and so the credit score eventually improves.

J.D. Byrider offers more than just pre-owned vehicles, they also offer competitive pricing and a way to rebuild credit. Serving areas including Saginaw, Bay City, and Midland Michigan.

Open a Small Credit Card and Pay it on Time

This one is a bit more self-explanatory: rebuilding credit may be just a matter of opening a small credit card and using it to improve a credit score. By making on-time payments to this credit card, a bad credit can eventually change for the better, making future financing easier.

Try to bring all accounts up to date or work out a payment plan for existing accounts. Going forward, it is a good idea to pay all bills on time. Missed payments can only hurt a person's credit score.

Check A Credit Report

It is a good idea to assess the entire financial situation in order to make the right decisions in the future. By checking their credit report, people with bad credit tend to see exactly where improvements can be made.

Sometimes the problem is with missed or late payments. Sometimes the debt utilization is too high. There are many clues that can show the right financial decisions moving forward.

Obtain an Installment Loan

There are other loans that can improve one's credit score, and a no credit dealership offers a similar thing. But installment loans, in general, are great for fixing bad credit. Make sure to plan a credit applications carefully, however, as too many loans can actually damage the credit score. Only obtain these loans when they are necessary.

Maintain Good Financial Habits

The only way to improve a credit score is to remain patient and keep practicing good financial habits. Make better financial decisions, and a bad credit score will eventually improve. In some cases, bad credit can start changing after 60 to 90 days. In worse cases, it may take years.

But patience is the key, and it is worth it in the long run.
