October 16, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

When living in the Tri-City area and shopping for a car, here are some things to be aware of. If a someone lives in Michigan, or anywhere in the Midwest, then they would be familiar with how cold it gets this time of year. Right after, the fall comes winter. And with that winter comes snow, ice and freezing rain and everything else in between.

There are a couple options on how to cope. The first is to stay indoors and hibernate. While that sounds glorious, there are bills yet to be paid, kids to run to school and more. Next option is to own a vehicle that runs great in the snow. Cars with great snow tires can do exceptionally well. Be a snow driving pro, and upgrade into an all-wheel drive or 4 wheel drive vehicle. Subarus are a favorite of Michigan drivers, for their great gas mileage, fantastic handling, and all-wheel drive capabilities.

Minivans, trucks, and SUVs are also a staple of Michigan's city roads and highways. There are not a huge amount of all-wheel drive options out for minivans. A great option would be Toyota's Sienna, a very nice all wheel drive minivan.

For trucks, the list goes on and on. There are many high-quality trucks that have 4X4 capabilities. GMC, Ford, Chevy, Toyota and more all have great vehicles that cater to different tastes. If driving a 4X4 truck, make sure to put some sand in the back to weigh it down. Different people put other things, like salt bags, in case of getting stuck, the salt can be used to melt the snow a bit and provide better traction.

SUVs like Chevy Suburbans, Tahoes, Ford Explorers and more are popular for many reasons. Their space, reliability, and quality are certainly several reasons for their popularity. One other thing, that drivers often forget. Michigan really is the automotive state. Vehicles were pretty much created in Detroit.

The Big Three, GM, Ford and Chrysler all have massive plants and ties to the local communities from Saginaw, Flint and down to the Metro Detroit area.

Always carry a cell phone, road flares, a sleeping bag or blanket for warmth, some water and food in case of a massive storm or getting stuck.
