Friendly Pest Control has announced that they have expanded the area that they serve in Indianapolis, Indiana, and surrounding areas. They point out that they have been offering quality pest management solutions for homes and businesses in Indianapolis and that they have now expanded the area that they service. Specifically, the areas that they now provide their services to include North-Central Indianapolis, Carmel, Westfield, Zionsville, Fishers, Noblesville, and more.

Friendly Pest Control spokesperson Mark Riley says, "We are happy to announce that we have been continually expanding the area of our operations to be able to serve more people in Indianapolis and surrounding areas. We eliminate all kinds of pests that can be encountered in Indianapolis, such as ants, bed bugs, cockroaches, fleas, mice, mosquitoes, spiders, and wasps."

Mark points out that with the summer season over, temperatures are starting to drop as the winter approaches. What this means is that many animals will start to seek shelter in homes and buildings in the effort to keep warm. These include rodents like mice. As such, rodents are some of the most common types of pests that homeowners and building owners need to deal with as the weather becomes colder.

Mice are particularly troublesome because they are able to crawl through small gaps. Thus, they can easily enter a home or building and hide somewhere in cracks on the walls and floors. The problem is that these tiny rodents can be carrying dangerous parasites, such as ticks and fleas. Ticks and fleas are also pests that have to be eliminated from the home or building. Furthermore, mice can chew into electrical wires, furniture and other items in the home or building, resulting into more problems.

Mark says that they do not just offer ways to get rid of mice and other pests, they also take steps to prevent the pests from returning. They can provide important advice on ways to prevent mice from entering, such as repairing damaged window screens, window frames and door frames.

Aside from mice, there are also rats, which are a bit bigger than mice. While rats will find it harder to enter a home or building because of their size, somehow some of them do find ways to enter. The problem is that rats can carry even more dangerous diseases that can be transmitted to people. Also, they can also have ticks and fleas with them. Thus, an effective pest management solution must also include the elimination of rats and preventing them from entering the house or building.

Another type of pest that Friendly Pest Control can help homeowners and building owners get rid of are bed bugs. These pests can cause a lot of problems not just in homes because of their bites but also in business establishments, such as hotels and motels. Their presence in hospitality industry establishments can significantly tarnish the reputation of these businesses, resulting in reduced profits and even business failure. Thus, Friendly Pest Control teams realize the importance of effective and comprehensive elimination of bed bugs.

Another kind of pest that Friendly Pest Control can deal with in Indianapolis are ants. The types of ants that are often found in this particular area are pharaoh ants, carpenter ants, pavement ants, and citronella ants. Ants usually don't pose a threat to humans but it is possible for them to carry diseases and they can contaminate food in the home or business establishment. Furthermore, carpenter ants can severely damage houses because they can bore into damp wood. Although unlike termites, they don't eat wood, their boring into the wood can weaken the wood and result in structural damage. Ants can also pose a unique problem because they are so small, they can get into small cracks in the home. Mark advises homeowners not to kill ants by swatting them because wounded ants emit pheromones, which call for other ants to come to that particular spot.

Mark explains that the pest specialists at Friendly Pest Control have been extensively trained to provide safe and correct solutions, using the latest in technology and techniques for pest treatment and extermination. They also ensure that they will respond as quickly as possible in order to prevent further damage from the pests. Furthermore, their services are provided with a satisfaction guarantee. This means that Friendly Pest Control will not stop until the pests have been totally eliminated.
