CarDaddy Announces New-Used Cars For Sale

October 31, 2018

CADILLAC, MI - October 31, 2018 -
CarDaddy, a vehicle marketplace based in Cadillac, Michigan, has announced that they have a number of new dealerships that are signing up to list their vehicles for sale on the company's website, giving buyers a number of options from which to choose. The company recently announced that onboarding new dealerships from Southern California and Las Vegas has really helped CarDaddy to enable people looking for high quality new and used vehicles at affordable prices to find what they are looking for.

John Beebe, the owner of the company, says, "We are pleased to announce that there are a number of new dealerships that are now with us in helping to provide consumers with the highest possible quality of new and used cars and trucks. These dealerships are right at this moment adding new vehicles to our online inventory for you to peruse."

The company states that consumers who are looking for a good quality vehicle at a fair price can visit CarDaddy's new page to get a look at all of the new and used cars and trucks that are available through various dealerships from around the nation. CarDaddy is an online resource that is available for those who are buying or selling a car or truck. The company states that those who have vehicles to sell can contact them to learn more about listing those vehicles with the site. Those looking for vehicles to buy can find a wide variety on the site now and the company states that they are regularly adding new vehicles.

"It's just like going to a dealership but without leaving your home or office," says Beebe. "We have dealerships that are adding new vehicles every single day, sometimes multiple times per day. If you cannot find what you are looking for right now, just give it a few hours or a day and you can see an entire new selection of cars and trucks that are available."

CarDaddy's page is regularly updated to ensure that only those vehicles that are actually currently available are viewable. Beebe says that they strive to bring quality leads to their private sellers and dealers. He has years of vehicle marketing experience and states that he knows how to get attention for dealers to the vehicles that they are trying to sell. In addition, he states that consumers can find a better deal on the site than they could on their own at most dealerships. He says that having vehicles listed on CarDaddy is a win-win for all parties involved.

Beebe says that the site lists a number of vehicle types and manufacturers. He says that those who are unsure of the type of vehicle that they want can look through various cars and trucks and take more time to make up their mind. He stresses that shopping at CarDaddy for a new or used vehicle is a bit less stressful than shopping at an actual dealership because there are no pushy salespeople to deal with while the consumer is looking. He says that this also benefits the dealership because they can reach a lot more customers by listing their vehicles online than they possibly could by simply letting them sit on a dealership lot.

Beebe says that the goal of CarDaddy is to help dealerships to sell off their inventories while at the same time helping consumers to find the high quality and affordable car or truck that they have been searching for. He says that the company is currently listed on Inc.com for trusted dealerships and says that they only work with dealerships that provide quality vehicles. He also states that they accept private party sales, as well and for those looking to buy, he states that there are guidelines in place to protect buyers when they purchase.

Beebe says that they work to ensure that consumers find only the best quality and prices of used cars, trucks and SUVs, both new and used. Each vehicle dealership is carefully screened by the company to ensure that they meet the high quality of standards that are set forth by CarDaddy.

Dealerships that would like more information on listing their new or used vehicles with the site can visit CarDaddy's Dealer Page online to learn more about how they can sign up. Consumers who are looking for a new or used vehicle can also visit the company online to take a look at their current inventory or visit them on any of their social media pages to learn more about their online selection.
