Chet Thornberry with Fergal Smith Surfboards has announced that his official reviews for two of the new 2018 paddleboards are now available. Thornberry recently reviewed the Wavestorm Paddleboard and the Catch Surf Odysea Stump paddleboard. Both reviews can be seen at <https://fergalsmith.com/author/fergalsmith/>. Thornberry states that his reviews are provided to readers in an attempt to educate them on a variety of surfboards and paddleboards. He says that he invites all surfing enthusiasts to read the reviews and determine for themselves which of the two boards are right for them. He states that in his reviews, he attempts to give valid and unbiased opinions and information about the paddle boards; information that should help surfers to make an informed buying decision.

"If you are going to go to the trouble and expense of buying a new board," says Thornberry, "then you want to know that you are getting the board that you want. I have done the testing for you and in my reviews, I hope that I can fill you in on all of the specifications and the pros and cons of each of these boards."

In his review, Thornberry states that the specifications of the Wavestorm paddle board make it stand out from others. The board is more than nine feet in length, which he states helps to increase the stability of the board.

He states that the board comes with adjustable paddles that make it suitable for different heights and has an ankle leash to alleviate worries of losing the board when surfing.

"The Wavestorm Board is a great paddleboard for beginners," says Thornberry. "It's one of the best that I have seen for those who are just getting started and it has a number of unique features that are not included in previous versions of Wavestorm boards."

Thornberry continues that the board is a lightweight option at just over 25 pounds and it has a storage strap as well as three marine wood stringers. More on this particular paddle board review can be seen on the official Fergal Smith Surfboards website at <https://fergalsmith.com/wavestorm-paddle-board-96-review/>.

Thornberry has also published a new review of the Catch Surf Odyssey Stump surfboard, which he says is also a good choice for beginning surfers. The stump is a shorter board, measuring in at just five feet in length. Thornberry says that it is one of the shortest boards that he has reviewed and states that it appears as if it has simply been cut off from a longer board, which is what gives it its name.

In his review, which can be seen at <https://fergalsmith.com/catch-surf-odyssey-surfboard-review/>, Thornberry says that the Catch Surf Stump is very lightweight and offers both stability and buoyancy, which make it the perfect choice for beginners or for those who prefer more float with their boards. The Stump offers a choice for quad fins or thruster fins. Thornberry says that the thruster fins offer more action and liveliness and quad fins are more designed for hold and stability, which is likely what beginner surfers would appreciate the most from this board.

He states that the Catch Surf Stump features a dual composite core, durable HDPE slick bottom and a number of additional benefits that are not found in many other boards. Thornberry gave the Stump a positive rating and says that overall, it is a great choice for smaller surfs or for those who like extra float that does not affect performance. Thornberry currently has a number of additional reviews on various surf and paddleboards on the Fergal Smith Surfboards official website.

Chet Thornberry is the mastermind behind Fergal Smith Surfboards. He claims that he named his business for his admiration for the famous surfer Fergal Smith.
