Free Range Camping in Eumundi, Queensland has announced that their new camping floor mats are now available in their online store. The company state that the mats, which come in packs of four, are now available for ordering and shipping all over the world.

Rob Catania, a spokesperson for the online camping store says, "We are excited to finally have these available for purchase. Our mats are made from 100 percent recycled materials and are perfect for your campsite to keep you above the sand, out of the water or generally off the ground where you can sleep more comfortably."

Free Range Camping says that the camping flooring mats are made in Australia and feature a solid, sturdy design. The company says that they are perfect for putting under fake grass to give customers an extra clean flooring area for their campsites. To celebrate the launch of these new floor mats, the company states that they are now offering free shipping on the mats to any customers in Australia.

"We just wanted to do something special to let our customers know how much we appreciate them and their loyalty,? says Catania. ?Believe me, you are going to want these if you regularly go camping and since you get four per pack, you have a floor mat for everyone in your camping party.?

The company states that their camping floor mats sale will only be valid for a limited time and states that any customer that wants to get the floor mats at their promotional cost should contact the company quickly. Catania says that the floor mats are an excellent way to keep sand, dirt and gravel from getting inside vehicles or tents when customers go camping.

The company says that the four mats can be used individually or they can be clipped together to cover an entire camping area. Catania says that this is an excellent way to clean up the area around a tent and avoid any rocks or other debris from being tracked inside on the bottoms of the campers' shoes. He states that the drainage cells that the mats are made from are perfect for helping to keep sleeping bags dry in the event of a wet camping trip. The cells raise the sleeping bag off the ground high enough to avoid water, mud and other debris. Catania says that the camping mats are 3cm or 30mm thick, which is high enough to keep sleeping bags off the ground and out of the way of water, dirt and other elements.

The company states that the camping mats can be used in a number of ways around the campsite and Catania says that for those who are interested in seeing the mats in action, there is a video offered on the company's official website that shows them being used for camping purposes. He says that they work very well under awnings to keep chairs and other outdoor furniture off the ground and clean and can be clipped together to be used as a pathway to avoid mud and other debris from being tracked throughout the campsite. The company says that the mats can be used as door mats, as shower mats for outdoor showers and in a number of other ways to make camping cleaner and less worry free when it comes to water, mud and outdoor debris. The mats are simple to join and unjoin and have a compressive strength of 100t/m². They are safe from mold, mildew, algae and the company states that they are fully resistant to oils and other chemicals.

Catania says that the company believes in these new mats so much that they are offering a full 12 month warranty against any defects. He says that those who are interested in learning more about the warranty or the specifications of the warranty can visit them online to read more. The company states that they are pleased to finally be launching these new camping mats onto their online store and state that they are now ready for purchase and delivery to those all over the world. They state that anyone who has questions about the mats, their specifications or uses, or camping enthusiasts who would like to learn more about other products offered by Free Range Camping can visit the company on their official website to see a complete list of the products that they offer. Those interested can also learn more about shipping, warranties and other information regarding any of the company's products on their website.
