Mason Seifert is a real estate photographer that works throughout Southern Wisconsin. Seifert recently announced that he is now providing aerial photography, drone videos, walkthroughs and regular listing photos for real estate agents. Seifert says that he provides all of these photography services with a 24 hour turnaround time.

"I offer a number of photography packages to meet every real estate photo need," says Seifert. "With years of photography experience, you can count on me to provide you the best quality pictures to help you with your listings."

Seifert says that he offers three basic packages, all of which have their own benefits for listings. Those who are interested in learning more about what each of these packages offer and their individual prices can visit Seifert on his official website at <https://mason-seifert-photography.business.site>. Packages range from those offering simple pictures of the property, interior and exterior, along with photo editing and 24 hour turnaround to also including exterior aerial photography, a one minute video flyover and an interior walkthrough video.

Seifert says that studies show conclusively that photos have many positive benefits for real estate agents in selling properties. High quality photos and videos tend to get more attention to listings and professionally done real estate photography can help to increase the number of website clicks on listings by more than 100 percent. Consumers want to see multiple pictures and videos of a property before they make the decision to actually view the property in person.

“Videos and images are what sells a property before they even see it,” Seifert says. “You want your listings to give your potential buyers as much information about the property as possible. Your buyers want to see every benefit that the property offers and then they will make the decision to contact you for a showing.”

Seifert says that his services also help to save real estate agents time. Instead of taking the time to take images of the properties that they are listing themselves, the agents can contact him for more professional images and spend more time working on the details of the listings and gaining more customers. Seifert says that a professional image goes a long way in convincing consumers to learn more about a property and that while many real estate agents may have years of experience in taking these pictures, only a true professional can capture the images that are virtually guaranteed to sell the property before the consumer even views it in person.

Studies show that using professional real estate photography services can help to sell a listing 50 percent faster than using agent taken pictures and videos. Seifert says that the images that an agent uses to represent his or her listing can have an impact on whether or not potential buyers continue with their viewing of the property. He says that using a standard point and shoot camera will simply not provide the professional quality of images that a professional can provide and that most real estate agents do not use more sophisticated cameras. He says that professional cameras will take more professional images and that potential buyers are much more likely to stop and spend some time actually looking through the images if they are taken by a professional.

Mason Seifert is from Hartland, Wisconsin. He says that his photography started as a hobby many years ago and turned into a career that he is passionate about. He has experience in wedding photography and has recently begun to add to his real estate photography portfolio. He now provides a full range of real estate photography services, all with 24 hour turnaround times to make it easier for real estate agents to provide potential buyers with an in depth look at their available properties. Seifert says that he is currently offering listing photos that includes interior and exterior images, exterior aerial photography, one minute exterior videos of the property, interior walkthroughs of the property on video, editing using Adobe Light Room as well as Adobe Premier Pro to give customers the best possible quality of images, and 24 hour turnaround on all real estate photography packages. He states that he has to date shot more than 200 houses and has the general photography and real estate photography experience needed to help agents to increase the power of their listings. Seifert says that real estate agents in Southern Wisconsin can contact him to learn more about the packages that he has available or read more on his website at <https://masonseifertphotography.wordpress.com>, where complete package listings are provided.
