Bruce Rickert of Peak Performance Tours announces their fun and educational music travel tours for students. Whether a choir, band, or orchestra, one of the most rewarding experiences is performing in front of a live audience. Peak Performance Tours give musical groups that opportunity along with traveling to new places and exploring new cities.

When approached about this announcement, Bruce Rickert had this to say, "Music groups work hard to perfect their craft and that effort deserves to be recognized. We have partnered with several major companies, clubs, and performance halls to give musical groups the opportunity to perform in prestigious venues and also tour the surrounding area. Many of the venues we are partnered with are in the center of major cities like New York and Nashville. We just want students and other musical participants to enjoy the benefits of their labor."

Peak Performance has created tours for all types of musical ensembles including jazz bands, marching bands, string ensembles, choirs, and even indoor color guards. The team at Peak Performance Tours strives to create an amazing experience for the artists that have worked hard to create music that any audience would enjoy and appreciate. Visit <https://www.facebook.com/PeakPerformanceTours/> to see some of the tours that have been created for their clients.

Chuck Schmidt, a Band Director for The Langley School in McLean, VA, shared this review about his experiences with PPT, "Peak Performance Tours is the best thing going in group travel. The planning is fabulous. The tour guides are responsive, helpful and flexible. On a Peak Performance Trip I can do two things I never could before: spend the majority of my time actually being a teacher for my students AND I can actually enjoy the trip myself."

Peak Performance Tours also partners with major festivals such as Dixie Classics, Orlando Fest, Fiesta val Music, and music showcases. Choosing a tour that includes a festival performance allows performers to also enjoy the festival itself outside of the actual performance.

While Peak Performance primarily works with student ensembles, they strive to provide music tour opportunities to many musical groups. Large jazz bands and church choirs have also enjoyed the travel and performance benefits offered by tours arranged by this company.

Lauren Brick, a recent performer, shared her experience about her trip with Peak Performance, "It was truly a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. I play violin in my school orchestra, but I don't really plan to play professionally in the future, so this was the only time I would get to experience playing in front of a huge audience. We knew we were playing in New York, but our director wanted the location to be a surprise and we found out the night before - we were playing at Carnegie Hall! We got to spend a day exploring the big apple and then the next day we performed in front of an audience that applauded so loudly I can still hear it! I am so grateful for this experience."

Peak Performance Tours offers opportunities to musical groups of all types and sizes. But student groups are a major component of the tours that Peak Performance arranges. Bands, orchestras, and choirs can make arrangements to perform in prestigious locations all across the United States including symphony halls, nationally-recognized jazz clubs, concert halls, or even the Empire State Building. Some performance tours have even included music festivals all over the world.

For ensembles interested in performing in a tour in Orlando Florida, Peak Performance has partnered with Disney's Performing Arts and Universal "Stars." Performers will be able to perform in the theme park and also have the opportunity to visit the park itself. While Disney and Orlando Studios are the most prominent parks that Peak has partnered with, they also have partnerships with other amusement parks worldwide.

Hannah Kinsley is a parent who chaperoned her child's Peak Performance Tour and shared this glowing review, "I couldn't believe the the experience my son got to have with this trip. This is nothing I would have been able to provide him on my own. He and the other students in the band were able to go several places and Peak Performance Tours had arranged fun and educational guided tours at each place. The guide was awesome and I was so glad that his school arranged the trip."

Peak Performance Tours also arranges class trips and senior trips for students whose teachers want them to experience an incredible and educational trip. Peak Performance takes the reigns and handles the logistics so that the only thing the teachers and students need to worry about is packing and arriving.
