July 25, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Home and garden company Haus & Garten? have their popular garden shears back on Amazon. The Haus & Garten Professional Series Titanium Pruning Shears, seems to be the final evolution of the pruning shears. To date, these garden shears have been very positively reviewed and the company hopes that this will continue.

"Our pruning shears have gone through a surprising lot of development over the years, but we believe that we have developed the ultimate garden tool for the professional or serious home gardener that is suited for both men and women," says Greg Schultz from Haus & Garten. "Our garden shears, are manufactured with the end users comfort and needs in mind."

The main thing that sets these garden shears apart is the technology behind the Haus & Gartens patented titanium coated blades. Made to last longer than regular steel blade pruners, the blade is made from the highest grade japanese high-tempered carbon steel which are then hard chromed with our combination of patent Titanium-Coated Technology, which provides a more durable cutting edge that is slower wearing. The benefit of this process not only increases the longevity of the blade but also make them corrosion resistant and adhesive resistant.

Since first having been released, the shears have received many positive reviews. "I garden for a living and have had the chance to try many types of shears," says Kmdy. "I am very happy with these pruners. The blades are holding up very well. I trimmed several trees and a rose and they are still sharp. The handles are comfortable and are a good fit for my hands (female)."

Haus & Garten understands the importances of the customer experience and offer some of the best customer support around. This is something many customers have commented on and what the company prides itself on.

The shears have been created to make gardening and pruning a breeze. No longer do the blades have to be sharpened after each cut of a rose bush. Rather, these will keep snipping on and on.
