November 19, 2018 -

A new listing of the top infrared sauna brands was just published which ranks top brands according to the criteria most important to consumers. It offers help for those considering this purchase which usually carries a high price tag and offers significant potential benefits. The report was published by Healing Heat Therapy, a name that is well known in the industry for providing detailed and accurate information.

Strict qualifications were required for high placement on the current top infrared saunas list. Healing Heat Therapy evaluated multiple criteria gained from its 6 year history in order to narrow the field to those highlighted.

When discussing the reasons for creating the list, Cody Martin of Healing Heat Therapy said, ?We evaluated each brand on the features most important to potential buyers. However we additionally included criteria that many consumers would not know to demand in the product they purchase. As one example, we studied the length of time the company has operated under the same brand name and if they honored any prior warranty that had been offered under the prior company name. Companies have been known to go out of business and not honor warranties. This is a situation we want consumers to be able to avoid.?

This is the third iteration of this year?s top rated sauna list. New information was gained on some top brands since its prior top infrared sauna list was reported here healingheattherapy.info/bestreport, however individual brand rankings remained the same.

In this industry, for many potential business owners, the process to begin a new sauna brand appears to be relatively easy. Forming an LLC and contacting one of 4 Chinese factories is essentially all that is required. As a result, many new start ups form each year and nearly half of those will close the business within the first 4 years.

This is the type of product and situation that Healing Heat Therapy's top ranking list can help consumers avoid.

?We are often contacted by infrared sauna companies asking to be reviewed and added to the annual rankings,? continued Cody Martin. ?However we rarely add a brand in that manner. Our current listings are based on 6 years of research. We also talk with the company owners and ask very direct detailed questions. A very important aspect is the additional focus we put on the individual products offered. As a result more health writers have begun to refernce us as seen here healingheattherapy.info/infraredhs. As an example one brand we have rated near the top of the list. But we also mention which of their models is superior to one of their other product lines.?

Healing Heat Therapy provides detailed reviews of infrared sauna brands and their individual saunas as well as publishing detailed reports on various aspects of the industry. Their recently formed company news page has begun listing news worthy events. The company, which was formed in 2012, can be contacted via email found on their website.
