Placer County, California, based Cali Dreamz Real Estate is advising families to consider the Granite Bay California area when choosing the location of their next dream home due to its safety as well as wide variety of amenities, no more than 10 minutes away from and within the city center.

Granite Bay is a suburb of Sacramento with a population of approximately 22,840. It is conveniently located in Placer County and is consistently ranked as one of the best places to live in California. Granite Bay offers residents a suburban feel and majority of families own their houses. More importantly, its public schools are well performing and are highly rated throughout the state. It is home to Granite Bay High School which is considered as the best public high school in Placer County.

Niche.com, a website that ranks cities based on its livability, ranks Granite Bay as second in the best places to raise a family in Placer County. It has achieved a consensus rating of 'A' on livability criteria such as public school, crime and safety, housing, nightlife, diversity and generally, for being a good place for families to live in.

One of Granite Bay residents, on the website, said, "Granite Bay is the perfect place to start a family. It has a great public school system and is a very safe area. It is a beautiful town with nicely paved roads and lots of greenery. It is a great place to ensure the safety of your loved ones."

Another online reviewer, who is working around the area said, "Towering trees adorn every nook and cranny along the freshly paved roads in Granite Bay. While every bustling suburb has its rush hours, the beauty of the area makes the commutes to school and work more than enjoyable. Most importantly, the weather is superb with comfortable temperatures and only some occasional surprise of overcast days. The proximity to Sacramento which is only half an hour away, as well as the Galleria Mall and Folsom Lake, makes Granite Bay an idyllic area either for work or permanent residence."
